

I believe the FCC's priorities are misguided and antiquated. I was neither offended nor shocked at the superbowl halftime show and believe any investigation would be a waste of taxpayer dollars.

I am much more concerned with mergers and consolidation in the entertainment/broadcast industry. I believe removing the ownership caps of TV stations will deplete the diversity of views transmitted over public airwaves as evidenced by the consolidations of multiple station's news rooms in several markets across the country, (such as CBS and UPN sharing the same newsroom in Los Angeles).

I believe these mergers are far worse than any Superbowl halftime show and The FCC should investigate how the public will be affected by consolidation.
